MIDDLE ENGLISH DICTIONARY ENGLISH/EDITORIAL
The Middle English Dictionary is inviting applications from qualified persons interested in up to seven years of work in Middle English lexicography. Appointments will be made initially for a single nine- or twelve-month period, to be followed by review and evaluation; subsequent reviews will occur at periodic intervals during the seven-year period. All new staff members will undergo training in (1) the use of MED bibliographical and other resources, (2) the preparation of materials for editing, and (3) the process of editing itself. Appointments will be made at the levels of both Assistant Research Editor and Associate Research Editor, depending on individual qualifications. Promotion from Assistant to Associate Research Editor will follow promptly on the demonstration of competence, productivity, and aptitude for lexicography. While the PhD in Old or Middle English is not in itself an absolute requirement, evidence of extensive graduate-level study of Old and Middle English language and literature is essential. In addition, competence in another medieval vernacular, in Latin, in paleography, or in other related medieval studies would be valuable; and a modern foreign language would be useful. Interested persons should send a letter of application and a curriculum vitae with details of relevant course work and employment to Chairman, MED Planning Committee, Department of English, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Michigan 48104.
