U OF REDLANDS, P.O. Box 3080, REDLANDS, CA

LIBERAL STUDIES

The Department of Liberal Studies at the Alfred North Whitehead Center for Life-long Learning invites nominations and applications for a tenure-track position in English and composition at the level of Assistant Professor. The position is year-round, and provides one month of leave per annum. The University of Redlands, located in southern California, is a private, non-denominational liberal arts university, which offers programs for both residential and non-traditional students. The University's Alfred North Whitehead Center for Life-long Learning provides innovative courses and degree programs for working adults throughout southern California. The successful candidate will have the opportunity to set up and oversee a writing-across-the-curriculum program for Whitehead students. Beyond this curricular innovation and design, this faculty member will have the responsibility of recruiting, training, and evaluating part-time faculty to teach in such a program and to train other full-time faculty in the implementation of the program in their respective disciplines. Other areas of responsibility include the teaching of courses in composition, writing, critical thinking and literature, and recruiting, training and evaluating faculty who teach in these areas. The University of Redlands also expects its faculty to maintain active scholarship and to serve the community in committee work and governance. We invite applications from persons with earned doctorates in English or Comparative Literature, rhetoric and composition. Applicants must have experience in curricular design for writing-across-the-curriculum and in teaching adult students. Experience in interdisciplinary and collaborative settings is strongly encouraged. The salary and benefits are highly competitive. We especially encourage women and minority candidates to apply. Applications, including a curriculum vitae and names of three references, are welcomed immediately. The committee will begin their review of applications on 15 August 1994, but all applications are welcomed until the position is filled. Please send all material to: Dr. Lucille Sansing, Dean, Alfred North Whitehead Center, University of Redlands, P.O. Box 3080, Redlands, CA 923-73-0999.
