<http://www.brown.edu>

The Department of American Civilization, Brown University, seeks a distinguished senior scholar to initiate and oversee a proposed M.A. program in Public Humanities and to serve as the director of the John Nicholas Brown Center for the Study of American Civilization (JNBC). We seek a leading academician/practitioner to provide vision and energy for an exciting new initiative in the presentation and interpretation of humanities and cultural scholarship. The new faculty member will shape both parts of this initiative, the proposed M.A. program and the further development of the John Nicholas Brown Center. Offered within the Department of American Civilization, the MA will be a two year course of study preparing students to explain academic research to the public. The JNBC was established in 1985 with a mission to advance scholarship and education in American Studies and to serve as a center for the active study of art, architecture, literature, history and historic preservation. The Center is housed in the Nightingale-Brown House, a National Historic Landmark located on the Brown campus. The University is fully committed to expanding the JNBC's role as a scholarly center; to enhancing its integration into the intellectual life of the University; and to exploring the ways in which it can serve as a national laboratory for the public humanities through the new graduate degree program and other activities and programs developed by the new Director. Qualifications include a PhD in a relevant field of American cultural studies and a record of distinguished scholarly publication. In addition, candidates should possess administrative experience commensurate with oversight of a scholarly center at a leading research university and knowledge of public programming and community outreach. Responsibilities will include the establishment and oversight of the MA program; teaching in the Department of American Civilization; directing the John Nicholas Brown Center; and oversight and continued stewardship of the Nightingale-Brown house. The Director of the JNBC reports directly to the Provost of the University. The successful candidate will be appointed at the rank of full professor with tenure in the Department of American Civilization. Please send a letter of application, a curriculum vita and a list of references to JNBC Search Committee, Office of the Provost, Box 1862, Brown University, Providence, RI 02912. Review of applications will begin July 1, 2003 and will continue until the position is filled or closed. Further inquiries are encouraged. Please contact Susan Smulyan, Chair of the Search Committee (401-863-1694, Susan_Smulyan@brown.edu) with questions. Brown University is an EEO/AA Employer. Minorities and women are encouraged to apply.

Evaluate AP Exams at the Annual College Board AP Reading

Each year in June, college faculty and high school teachers from all over the world gather to evaluate and score the free-response section of the AP Exams. These hard-working professionals, known as readers, are vital to the AP Program because they ensure that students receive AP grades that accurately reflect college-level achievement in each discipline. Readers are paid honoraria, provided with housing and meals, and reimbursed for travel expenses. At the AP Reading, you will also exchange ideas, share research experiences, discuss teaching strategies, establish friendships, and create a country-wide network of faculty in your discipline that can serve as a resource throughout the year. Apply online at www.ets.org/reader/ap or visit AP Central, the College Board's online home for AP professionals at apcentral.collegeboard.com. Or, you may contact Performance Scoring Services at ETS at (609) 406-5443 or via e-mail at apreader@ets.org to request an application. Applications are accepted throughout the year but you are encouraged to apply now to be considered for appointment to the next AP Reading.
