INTRODUCTION

Every year many foreign language department chairmen in institutions of higher education ask the Modern Language Association to help them in filling vacancies on their staffs. Recently there has been a marked increase in the number of such requests. At its spring 1966 meeting the MLA Executive Council encouraged the Executive Secretary to publish a list of vacancies in foreign language departments, both as a service to college and university department chairmen and as an aid to placing teachers in positions for which they are well-suited.

The Foreign Language Vacancy List is published three times in an academic year: in November, in March, and in May. Beginning with the November, 1967 issue, only subscribing departments will receive the November, March and May issues automatically. The list will be available to individuals requesting it for one dollar per copy.

Your attention is called to the suggestions about applying for positions and the sources of information about institutions and about teaching opportunities overseas.

The italicized abbreviations in the right-hand margin of each entry indicate the area(s) in which the vacancy occurs. Following is a key to the abbreviations:

C - Chinese
F - French
G - German
Gr - Greek
H - Hebrew
I - Italian
J - Japanese
L - Latin
LL - Language Lab.
ML - Modern Languages
N - Norwegian
P - Polish
Po - Portuguese
R - Russian
S - Spanish
Sc - Scandinavian

A Placement Guide for Graduate Students

Students who have the Ph.D or are near it should begin job hunting with the expectation that they will settle down and spend a number of years at the place they first select. They may not do this, of course. There is considerable mobility in the teaching profession today. But they will be happier if they go with the intention of creating courses which will be a permanent part of their lives, of participating fully in faculty and student affairs, of producing the kind and amount of research that the institution demands (if any), and of making a home in the community. In general, a moderate amount of money will not make up the difference between an institution in which the beginning teacher wishes to stay and one which seems alien to him. With this in mind, the best position is the one that offers the best opportunity for advancement considering the talents and interests of the new faculty member regardless of its geographical location. If the conditions of employment seem good, the job candidate should not be afraid to move about the country. All good institutions have social as well as intellectual resources. Though it is not true in all cases, job candidates who must for family or other reasons limit themselves to a single area are handicapped.

The job candidate should consider very carefully the institution to which he applies. What are his talents or ambitions -- to do historical research, criticism, administration, creative writing, basic composition, or beginning foreign language teaching or what combinations of these, besides teaching in general? What will be expected of him over a period of perhaps three years at the institution? In what ways will his performance be evaluated? Rules for tenure vary somewhat, but in general a new appointee at the assistant professor rank may be expected to be assessed at the end of three years and considered for permanent tenure and/or promotion at the end of six. Find out what the institution wants and don't go unless you expect to deliver it. There is much variety in colleges and universities. You can find one that suits your particular abilities if you ignore geography and free yourself of false notions of prestige.

Ask around. Every member of your graduate department presumably went to college and graduate school. So did every faculty member who remembers you from your undergraduate days. Where did they go to college and to graduate school? Do some research on this. The institution bulletins will usually tell you. If you get an offer, try to find someone who has taught at the institution or been a student there. His views may be prejudiced by various things including especially nostalgia, but you will learn something from the man who has been on the scene.

How to apply for a position. If your college or university has a placement service, register there before you write letters of inquiry about jobs and be sure all the required documents are filed. The moment you write, a department chairman may telephone the placement bureau for your documents without asking you. He will be very annoyed if they are not available. Private, commercial placement bureaus also list appointments though many larger colleges and universities do not use them. Placement services may provide special forms which Can be reproduced photographically for letters of recommendation. Do not ask a faculty member to write several copies of a recommendation if one in the placement bureau will suffice. The placement bureau will generally duplicate your entire docket--transcripts, letters, and other materials--and send it to any chairman who requests it. But it will insist that the docket be requested. No chairman wants an unsolicited stack of credentials.

What to include in the letter of inquiry. Make the letter brief--one page. Attach to it a vita in outline form. In the letter do the following things:

1. Announce that you are a candidate for a position. If you are seeking a higher rank than instructor make this clear.

2. List briefly the highlights of your previous teaching experience--where and what courses taught.

3. If you are especially interested or qualified in such fields as teacher-training, civilization and culture, applied linguistics, teaching of English as a foreign language, directing a language lab, or other special administration, make this clear.

4. Mention your subject of specialization on the doctoral dissertation or what it will probably be, if you know this. And, if you have published anything, mention it here.

5. Give the names of three people who will recommend you and whose letters are in your docket if you are registered at a placement service. Give the address of the placement service.

6. Express your willingness to be interviewed at the annual meeting of the Modern Language Association and at any other meeting to which the department chairman is likely to go.

On the vita sheet list in summary fashion:

1. Your name; academic address, home address, and telephone number.

2. Your age; date of birth; citizenship.

3. Whether you are married or single, and if married, how many children.

4. Dates, places, and areas of concentration of your degrees.

5. Teaching appointments from the most recent, including courses taught.

6. Other relevant employment.

7. Publications.

8. Names and addresses of recommenders.

You will note that there is some duplication here, but don't worry about this. In the letter you are trying to present yourself attractively. In the vita you are giving the chairman some quickly available data.

TEACHING OPPORTUNITIES ABROAD

The Counseling Division of the Institute of International Education advises:

Requirements for teaching abroad, as to educational background, previous teaching experience, language ability, age, and certification, vary depending on the program. The length of appointments also varies; cultural exchange awards are usually tenable for an academic year, while some other programs require a commitment of several years. In general, application should be made from six months to a year in advance of the expected appointment date. In each case, specific information should be requested from the administering agency.

The Institute of International Education will send, upon request, a brochure listing sources for overseas teaching positions. Write to the Counseling Division, IIE, 809 United Nations Plaza, New York, N.Y. 10017.

Application for a lectureship in a university under the Department of State Educational Exchange Program (Fulbright-Hays Act) should be made to:

Conference Board of Associated Research Councils
2101 Constitution Avenue
