Jacobe, Princeton Univ.; Christopher John Newfield, Univ. of California, Santa Barbara; Gary Rhoades, American Assn. of Univ. Professors; Richard Alan Yarborough, Univ. of California, Los Angeles

Michael Bérubé is MLA second vice president and Paterno Family Professor in Literature at Penn State University. He is the author of seven books, most recently The Left At War. He has written on the ethical treatment of part-time faculty members, the role of graduate students in the profession, and the threats to academic freedom posed by the overreliance on contingent labor.

Barbara Bowen is president of the Professional Staff Congress, the union that represents faculty and staff members at the City University of New York. A member of CUNY’s doctoral faculty, she has a history in the labor movement and a strong belief in grassroots organizing as the key to a union’s power.

Reed Way Dasenbrock has been a full-time administrator since 1994. He is the author of The Literary Vorticism of Ezra Pound and Wyndham Lewis; Imitating the Italians: Wyatt, Spenser, Synge, Pound, and Joyce; and Truth and Consequences: Intensions, Conventions, and the New Thematics. He is vice chancellor for academic affairs at the University of Hawai‘i, Mānoa.

Monica F. Jacobe, a writer, is working on a memoir that explores what it means to grow into womanhood without a female role model in twenty-first-century America and on a critical examination of the transformative nature of work identity in southern novels since the 1960s.

Christopher Newfield teaches American studies in the English Department at the University of California, Santa Barbara. He is the author of The Emerson Effect: Individualism and Submission in America; Ivy and Industry: Business and the Making of the American University, 1880–1980; and Unmaking the Public University: The Forty-Year Assault on the Middle Class.

Gary Rhoades is general secretary of the American Association of University Professors. His research has focused on professions in academe, university restructuring, and science and technology issues in higher education. He is the author of Managed Professional: Unionized Faculty and Restructuring Academic Labor.

Richard Yarborough is professor of English and faculty research associate with the Ralph J. Bunche Center for African American Studies at the University of California, Los Angeles. He has written on Frederick Douglass, Charles Chesnutt, Harriet Beecher Stowe, and Richard Wright. He directs the Library of Black Literature reprint series for the University Press of New England.
